N. JEROME STOWELL, together with other prominent American scientists, worked for many years to bring light and clarity to the hidden secrets of atomic science.

Along the way he often trod paths which were until then unknown, and made discoveries which not only benefited science, but also changed his view of life. We leave it to him to tell about some of his experiences:

I was a cynical atheist who believed that God was only a figment of man's imagination. I was not able to believe in a living divine being.

One day I was working in the larger laboratory of a clinic. I was burdened with the task of measuring the wavelength and force of the radiation of the human brain. I agreed to undertake a delicate experiment with my co-workers. We wanted to examine what occurs in the human brain while passing from life to death.

For this purpose, we had chosen a woman who suffered from a deadly brain cancer. In soul and spirit she was perfectly normal and was generally known for her loving cheerful attitude. Physically, however, she was in a very poor condition. We had been informed that she was a woman who had lived believing in Jesus Christ as her personal Redeemer.

Shortly before her death we placed a highly sensitive recorder in her room. This instrument would reveal what was going to happen in her brain during the last moments of her life. Above the bed we additionally placed a tiny microphone to enable us to hear what she said, should she at all speak before dying.

WAITING TIME

We five scientists went to the adjoining room and stood waiting before our instruments in suspense. The indicator was on "zero", and was able to move up to 500 degrees to the right and left in positive and negative registration.

SE WITHIN MAN

the same apparatus, we had measured the output of a broadcasting station. We recorded a positive reading of nine degrees from this test.

FINAL MOMENTS

The last moments of the dying woman seemed to have arrived. Suddenly we heard her praying — she asked God to forgive all those who had wronged her during her life. Then she gave full expression of her faith in God by saying, "I know that You are and will remain the only reliable source of power for all Your creatures." She thanked Him for His strength with which He had supported her all her life and for the assurance that she belonged to Jesus. She told Him that in spite of all her suffering, her love for Him had not diminished. Her words revealed an indescribable bliss as she rejoiced in the joy that she would soon see her Saviour.

We stood around our instruments, deeply moved. We glanced at each other and were not ashamed of our tears — as for myself I had not wept like this since childhood.

Suddenly, while the woman continued to pray, we heard a clicking from our instruments. The indicator was at 500 degrees positive and continually beating against the limitation. The radiation energy must have exceeded the scale of our instruments and only the small limitation pin hindered the indicator from climbing higher.

Our thoughts raced. With the help of a technical survey we had made a tremendous discovery: the brain of a dying woman who was in contact with God, developed a power which was 55 times stronger than the output of the world-wide broadcast message we had previously recorded. (Here one is reminded of the statement by doctor of medicine Alexis Carrel the Nobel Prize winner, that "Prayer is the strongest form of generative energy").

FURTHER TESTS

To continue our observation we began a new experiment. This time we chose an almost insane man. After we had set our instruments, we asked the nurse to irritate the patient in some way. The man reacted with insults and swearing, even using the Name of God in a blasphemous way. Our instruments began to click — our eyes were fixed to the scale. We were shocked to see the indicator on 500 degrees negative and forcing itself against the limitation pin. Through instrument measurements we had established what occurs in the human brain while transgressing one of the ten commandments.

QUESTIONS

At that moment my philosophy of life began to crumble — could there be a God after all, who is able to receive the message sent to Him in prayer? In that case even I was standing before the all knowing God.

Since I wanted to be honest with myself, I could not close out the penetrating truth. Thus I became a happy disciple of Jesus who learned to believe in Jesus Christ as my personal Saviour.

How would the dictator of this scale react in your case?

Jesus Christ said, "Come unto Me all you that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matthew 11:28)
